OZONE – BI-FARE

What is Ozone?

Ozone (O₃), sometimes called “activated oxygen”, contains three atoms of oxygen rather than the two atoms we normally breathe. Ozone is the second most powerful sterilant in the world and can be used to destroy bacteria, viruses, and odours. Interestingly, ozone occurs quite readily in nature, most often as a result of lightning strikes that occur during thunderstorms. In fact, the “fresh, clean, spring rain” smell that we notice after a storm most often results from nature’s creation of ozone.

However, we are probably most familiar with ozone from reading about the “ozone layer” that circles the planet above the earth’s atmosphere. Here, ozone is created by the sun’s ultraviolet rays.

This serves to protect us from ultraviolet radiation.

HOW DOES OZONE WORK?

The third oxygen atom of ozone makes it extremely reactive. This atom readily attaches itself to other odour molecules. When contaminants such as odours, bacteria, or viruses make contact with ozone, their chemical structure is changed to less odorous compounds. As more ozone attacks the remaining compounds, the odour is eventually destroyed. This process is called oxidation. Ozone essentially reverts back to oxygen after it is used. This makes it a very environmentally friendly oxidant.>

HOW IS OZONE PRODUCED?

There are basically two methods of producing ozone: ultraviolet and corona discharge. Corona discharge creates ozone by applying a high voltage to a metallic grid sandwiched between two dielectrics. The high voltage passes through the dielectric to a grounded screen/plate and in the process, creates ozone from oxygen present in the chamber. Ultra-violet (UV) light creates ozone when a wavelength at 254 nm (nanometers) hits an oxygen atom. Both processes split oxygen molecules into single oxygen atoms (O). These atoms combine with another oxygen molecule (O₂) to form ozone (O₃).

HOW LONG DOES THE OZONE LAST?

As soon as ozone is formed in the generator and dispersed in a room, it will start to revert back to oxygen. This step occurs by several processes including the following: Oxidation reactions with organic material such as odour or smoke. Reactions with bacteria, etc. which again consume ozone by oxidation reactions. Additionally, ozone breaks down thermally. Higher temperatures destroy ozone quicker than lower temperatures. The ozone that remains is referred to as Residual ozone. “Residual” ozone created will return to oxygen usually within 20-30 minutes, in amounts equal to half its level. What this means is that after each subsequent 20-30 minute period there would be half as much residual ozone left at the end of the period as was present at the beginning of the period. This is similar to a geometric progression of 16;8;4;2;1. In practice, the half-life is usually less than 30 minutes due to temperature, dust, and other contaminants in the air. Therefore, ozone, while very powerful, doesn’t last long. It does its job and then disappears back into safe oxygen.

The intent of ozone therapy is to increase the amount of oxygen in your body. A higher oxygen level can boost your immune system while promoting healing.

This happens through cell regeneration – the process of replacing or repairing damaged cells.
